I want the hand of A.A. always to be there. And for that: I am responsible."*

ON LIFE'S TERMS

When we decide the hows and whens of Life, we are setting ourselves up for a disappointment. Life is bigger than us and vastly more complicated, and by trying to control it, we are not taking Life on Life's terms, but instead trying to impose our will on it, making Life take us on our terms. We can see the evidence that we are doing this everywhere:

When we rage at traffic or the weather, when people disappoint us and we cannot forgive them, when we wish desperately to change things that are beyond our ability to change. Fighting against that which we cannot change is the surest way to meet with futility.

When we are not taking life as it comes we often use circumstance to justify our behavior, trying to make the circumstances fit the story we have created about them. Blaming others is a sure sign that you have fallen into this trap. When we blame others, or really, do anything except take responsibility for that which we can control, we are attempting to rewrite history, and we only show how incapable we are of facing reality. While it is always good to get some perspective on life, the problem in not facing reality is that it—reality— is not going anywhere. Reality is bigger than you. When we avoid responsibility, we attempt to subvert the lessons that Life is constantly offering us. This does not mean that the lesson is ever avoided. Rather, you've only delayed the inevitable, and shown that you need a stronger lesson in order to deal with the issue properly.

The trick to taking Life on its own terms is to practice equanimity. It is the place exactly in-between aversion and craving, where you only accept the reality of what is before you. The skill lies in seeing reality clearly, free from ego and illusion, and to avoid clinging to pleasurable states and circumstances even as you avoid aversion to difficult states of being and circumstances. Addiction can often be added to by emotional states of craving and aversion, and equanimity is the practice of balancing. We, as humans, naturally incline towards one of these two states of being. Truthfully, it is more like a scale, with there being a small set of things you absolutely crave as well as a small set of things you always avoid, with a lot of gray area in between. Staying in the middle of this scale takes skill, and being mindful and calm enough to remember equanimity is a lifelong hobby.

THE A.A. TRADITION SEVEN

Every A.A. Group out to be fully self-supporting, declining outside contributions.

We do have to be practical. A group can hardly hold its regular meetings on a street corner, and an empty basket won't fill a coffee urn. As soon as we become active in a group, we learn how many expenses are involved in making its meetings effective. Then our horizons broaden. What about that intergroup or central office so many of us called to ask for help? Phone companies don't give free service. Beyond our own locality, we learn about the A.A. General Service Office and the work it does for groups everywhere. A.A. activity is self-supporting at all levels, and in every case the responsibility comes right back to us, the individual members, for we are A.A.

Perhaps, especially when we are very new, our contributions clink, rather than rustle. The first members were in the same fix, and it seemed to them that A.A. would need more outside help than the modest gifts then coming in.

Their plans required grand-scale philanthropy. (Tradition Six hadn't evolved yet; Bill W. recalled a scheme for "a chain of hospitals.") But John D. Rockefeller Jr., an early friend said, "I am afraid that money will spoil this thing." A few A.A.'s had already reached the same conclusion; gradually, this minority became a majority as experience showed that members themselves could provide enough to finance A.A.'s proper aim.

In Tradition Seven, there's a note of realism: Handsome gifts may have strings attached. We even put a limit of $5,000 on the amount members may leave to A.A. in their wills or contribute annually while living, so that none of us can buy influence in A.A., no matter how rich we are. Money may pose a different problem if a group treasury grows too fat, beyond a prudent reserve. Squabbling over uses for the spare cash, groups have lost their unity and strayed from their purpose. But there's one simple solution that strengthens our unity and advances our purpose: Give the excess to A.A. activities and services.

LIFE ON LIFE'S TERMS

Self-observation will aid greatly in equanimity, which after all is just a fancy word for taking life on life's terms. When we watch ourselves and our thoughts, we become more familiar with our patterns, and often this is when we see them for what they truly are. We see a negative thought formulate and become anxiety, self-doubt, escapism, and instead of believing it to be circumstances, we realize our role in it. This in turn leads to realizing that we have a conscious choice in terms of our reactions. As the anxiety about what each new day will hold subsides, we find that living in the present moment, taking life on life's terms, is more achievable. It is about only seeing what is, not what you want or what you fear, and then acting accordingly.

-Anonymous

Experience, Strength, and Hope - GRATITUDE

Many of us have learned the importance of making a gratitude list, especially when one is feeling resentful. Here's a particularly poetic list of what we can all be grateful for, regardless of what else may be going on in one's life.

-Craig R.

In Thanks

For the sun and the dawn which we did not create;
for the moon and the evening which we did not make;
for food which we plant but cannot grow;
for friends and loved ones we have not earned and cannot buy;
for this gathered company which welcomes us as we are, from wherever we have come;
for the willing association of fellow seekers and spiritual companions who help to keep us human and encourage us in our quest for beauty, truth and love;
for all things which come to us as gifts of being from sources beyond ourselves;
gifts of life and love and friendship;
we lift up our hearts in thanks this day.
